Wednesday 02 February 2022

Some of these reports not meeting a certain level of criteria which would allow ROSS to do that work - Criminal offense / Concern they may commit Criminal offense / Public Safety Concerns. Agreed to his advice to push back at some sufficient detail is obtained and that they meet the criteria - if not do not move forward, then speak to me if needed or concerned over clients locations. Will send e-mail.

1030 to 11:00 meeting to Tina Chalk / Kari Datt re:

"Bringing the Classroom Home" FAA Funding Plan. Explained reasoning to go in person management rather than FAA (budget / PC advice / CCT discussions). Also discussed use of FES funding for personnel and Analytical / Support as we just trained funding for those positions could use it though Cabinet positions as an offset along in corresponding DROC for other like Child Computers.

Also talked about video - expressed my concern over how language utilized in the video could potentially cause issues in future court proceedings if Chgs were laid. Agreed to the language and with our ability to support it's use but asked if they could please have a Crown Review as an extra step to ensure we are not creating an issue that could be problematic in the future. They advised there were Crown assigned and they would ensure this was done. Also discussed number of Cars and Computers - advised I would like team to take another look at the report for Vehicles / Computers as it have difficulty supporting a 1:1 ratio.

- updated Commissioner on status letter body

Subject: Confidential - Information Sharing

Deputy,

POIB is increasingly receiving requests for information, intelligence, open source scrapes, background checks etc on a wide array of societal actors. Many of these entities are social movements that have perspectives that diverge from the mainstream – they may not be engaged in criminal activity, nor do we have grounds to believe or suspect that they are. These requests are emanating from many clients internal and external to the OPP at an escalating rate – and with great urgency.

I have several concerns both professional and ethical:

- On the ethical front, several requests do not relate to the parameters that the state/police should consider in intelligence operations. The potential “targets” are not engaged in criminal activity nor do we have reasonable grounds to believe that they will be. They may oppose governmental policy and engage in protest.
- On the professional front, many requests are received as a culmination of an email chain with many different departments, entities, persons, etc. weighing in on the requests in the form of partial sentences or merely utilizing the forward button and expressing urgency. As a result, the request and rationale are provided out of context and with not parameters in law. Just yesterday, this occurred with input from a regional health office through multiple levels of government about an activity that was not occurring.

There appears to be an incredibly heightened appetite for any/all information on entities that cause discomfort to the status quo – be they companies, school boards, government authorities or political leaders. And this appetite is being articulated in irresponsible ways – attaching urgency to requests.

I am concerned that “success” is seen as satisfying intelligence requirements and requests quickly – as opposed to satisfying the correct intelligence requirements to the correct actors. I have acted to prevent/slowdown these requests and/or the responses to them. Often, in times of social turmoil, anxiety breeds fear and demands for information. I am reminded, and cognizant, of the mass demand for information on “terrorists” that succeeded 9/11 (resulting in the O’Connor Commission; and the McDonald Commission in relation to the RCMP Security Service over-zealousness that resulted in the creation of CSIS.

Perhaps my biggest concern is police leaders and municipal, provincial and national government leaders demanding/ requesting information to satisfy a request without understanding the wherefore or the why.

He clarified protest locations - he made it clear that Ottawa was different from other protests. Chief Staley began to speak actually it was more like yelling and went on to express his displeasure over how other locations were being compared to Ottawa / how their response was different felt this was not a fair comparison. Also discussed his analysis of the Hudson Reports and how his interpretation of what we knew was different. Commissioner intervened after a while to get things back on track and suggested a follow-up meeting to try and iron out the differences. Pat Carroll as to his hoping to speak to anticipated future events. His updates provided stand table his ongoing protests provided.

Follow-up meeting to Chief Staley, myself, Pat Carroll and Commissioner. Chief Staley pointed out that he had a Strike and Legal Counsel with him for the follow-up conversation. Chief Staley continued to yell while expressing his opinions in relation to how he felt current information was unfairly characterized and how comparison over various events was not fair. Commissioner interrupted him and advised him that he felt uncomfortable being yelled at. This did not seem to help and Chief Staley continued to yell. Commissioner interjected and provided Pat with an opportunity to clarify his

Deputy,

Chief Sloly asked five questions in relation to four locations (Ottawa, Toronto, Ambassador Bridge/Windsor and Blue Water Bridge / Sarnia). POIB has endeavored to answer these questions as best as we can but they are difficult. I have also attached a list of convoys slated for events tomorrow. Further, I have attached an Operational Intelligence Assessment. This is the third iteration of this report. It has already been disseminated to Ottawa Police Service but you may wish to provide to Chief Sloly for his reference as it addresses many of the salient matters in the briefing.

The questions were as follows:

1. What is the exact number of trucks in the location currently?
2. What will the exact number of trucks be on Saturday?
3. What is the number of protesters in each location currently?
4. What will the number be on Saturday?
5. What is the extremist involvement?

Further, he clarified that he wished the answers to be provided by “confirmed intelligence” not aspirational information. This is an exceedingly difficult task with incidents of this type – many people will determine whether or not to participate based upon whim or a consideration of many personal factors.

ROW 1: The total number counts of trucks are not really the purview of intelligence and we have not necessarily engaged covert teams in counting total numbers of persons or trucks. Our analysts contacted the National Capital Region Command Centre Combined Intelligence Group for the person and truck/vehicle count. In Toronto, the event has not occurred yet and the numbers at the Ambassador Bridge and Bluewater Bridge are provided from on scene police observations.

ROW 2: In terms of the number of trucks to arrive on Saturday – this just cannot be known. The individuals have neither assembled nor departed. I have provided the information for the number of convoys that are organized – the most notable is from Quebec. OPS Inspector Bryden followed up with the SQ on the HENDON call about this. I have also attached a spreadsheet of the known rallying points for the main protest sites.

ROW 3: The numbers of protesters was taken from discussions with the NCR CC CIG. Two of the locations have 0 persons present.

ROW 4: The number of people to attend any of these locations tomorrow is not the subject of “confirmed intelligence”. It is a matter of inductive logic and extrapolation based upon precedent and social media organization – and also weather conditions and actions taken elsewhere.

EXTREMISM: There is no official case law or criminal code definition on extremism as there is on terrorist entities and criminal organizations. We generally characterize a criminal extremist as individuals or entities that support violent criminal acts to pursue an ideology. In this sense there has been extremist sentiment expressed on-line on social media in relation to this event. But, I have not seen much evidenced in actual activity. This would be characterized by significant violent acts in line with an ideology that is extremist – i.e. Islamic Extremism or White nationalist. There is no information regarding the presence of terrorist entities nor have I seen evidence of significant “extremist” activity. Our analysts have provided two examples of entities that may fit the label of extremist but their actions have not necessarily illustrated this. Please see the analytical comment provided below the chart.

Response to Extremism Question:

Grievance-driven movements, like the Freedom Convoy 2022 and support events, may be more susceptible to the negative effects of heightened tensions leading to unpredictable behaviours owing to the impassioned beliefs of the participants and organizers alike.

These events may also attract extremist elements who view these public order events as an opportunity to advance their own agenda. As well, the presences of flags, symbols, and semiotics associated with ideologically motivated violent extremism and hate speech may prompt adversarial reactions leading to conflict. The presence of counter-demonstrators may increase this potential.

As with all forms of extremism, the potential for actors to inspire, incite, enable, and mobilize towards violence exists at any given time. The realization of an action/attack occurs when intent and capability meet with opportunity. Relative threat levels can increase or decrease in response to an actor's personal circumstances and where these may influence their perception of urgency to bring about change.

Deputy,

Chief Sloly asked five questions in relation to four locations (Ottawa, Toronto, Ambassador Bridge/Windsor and Blue Water Bridge / Sarnia). POIB has endeavored to answer these questions as best as we can but they are difficult. I have also attached a list of convoys slated for events tomorrow. Further, I have attached an Operational Intelligence Assessment. This is the third iteration of this report. It has already been disseminated to Ottawa Police Service but you may wish to provide to Chief Sloly for his reference as it addresses many of the salient matters in the briefing.

The questions were as follows:

1. What is the exact number of trucks in the location currently?
2. What will the exact number of trucks be on Saturday?
3. What is the number of protesters in each location currently?
4. What will the number be on Saturday?
5. What is the extremist involvement?

Superintendent Morris,

Evening,

On behalf of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police and the WRPS, please accept our sincere thanks to you and your team for all your hard work. Project Hendon ongoing situational reports continue to be very productive for policing in Canada. I also recognize that you and your team are working 24/7 to ensure the safety of all Canadians as well as our front-line members on the ground.

Sorry for the awkward moment on the call, it is important you and your team know that we fully support all your efforts.

Please, keep leading - you have our support and gratitude.

Good Morning Deputy

I have reflected on the events of last night. I very much appreciate your support and that of the Commissioner (especially his verbal interjection) and CCT.

I can assure you that I am fine personally and, more importantly, proud of the strategic and tactical contributions of POIB. I do have a couple of questions or concerns:

1. I am a guest at the Briefing and have no role in selection of attendees. I was not aware that there was a personal scribe or a lawyer present. I was informed following the formal Briefing and entering the specific conversation with Chief Sloly. The intelligence is intended for operational awareness and preparedness. It is provided candidly. I do not know the ethics or legality of the presence of a lawyer who appears to be acting for an individual- and made a documentary request.
2. The discussion of how Provincial intelligence works provided by Chief Sloly was not accurate. I wanted to interject but felt that the timing was ill-suited. OPP intelligence is not a function or derivative of municipal intelligence. The situation is much more complex. The Chief's statement that his department's inaction originally is part of "our failure" is not accurate nor acceptable to me. Again I chose not to articulate that. I am concerned that this is being recorded by a scribe and lawyer for a future usage - and it does not appear to be helping the people of Ottawa.

These are my concerns. Stemming from them is the final concern regarding the briefing that he requested. Again, given his focus on comparisons, and criticism and concern for his employment, I do not see the intention being crime prevention, law enforcement, assisting victims, public order and emergency management.

These are my thoughts.

Pat

Good morning Supt. Morris,

The intel briefing you provided at the Chiefs evening briefing yesterday was very helpful. As discussed, we are in the process of scheduling a special in-camera Ottawa Police Services Board meeting for you to brief them tomorrow on the intelligence threat assessment surrounding the convoy demonstration.

Can you let me know as soon as possible what time works best for you tomorrow to deliver the briefing.

Thank you – Christiane

Good afternoon Christiane,

Both Superintendent Morris and I would be able to provide a high level intelligence picture, in relation to the Freedom Convoy, to the Ottawa Police Services Board at an in-camera meeting as suggested. I am available to discuss with you a mutually agreeable time for this meeting and I would also suggest that OPS Intelligence Operations be represented at the meeting to answer any questions that may arise specific to Ottawa.

I can be reached on my cell phone at [REDACTED]

I could get back to OPS Council directly to organize things on his behalf. Also talked about upcoming briefing at 5pm and how that could proceed.

- spoke to Pat further about OPS Board briefing he agreed he could do it but would not feel comfortable doing it Monday - busy all day as general manager would like opportunity to look back to OPS dated and prepare himself perhaps Tues/Wed would be more appropriate.

1524/1533 sent two e-mails to Christine Hunslett of OPS - began - suggested both Pat and I could provide a high level briefing at an in-camera session - available to discuss time/date provided call plus number. Also sent Caynate e-mail re: Doc request they had made advising the doc in question had been sent to OPS dated - could be obtained through them.

1538 provided updates to COT regarding Stefan tractor transfer to fire services. Confirmed to them CIB is not local agency - Peterborough Police is local - PWB/POB has been engaged. E-mails to Chantal Tinkham/Adam Ferguson to look out to Peterborough to offer what ever assistance COT can provide.

- CASTING OUR NET

Deputy Cox,

I believe that law enforcement in this country is at a critical stage in terms of its ethics, its operational independence and its decision-making. This is a position that some law enforcement agencies have found themselves in at previous historical junctures – the FBI in the 1950s and 1960s, the RCMP in the 1980s and the law enforcement community generally following the events of September 11, 2001. In most cases, subsequent inquiries illustrated knee-jerk, overarching reactions. These “transition points” often result in significant inquiries – and these venues enforce scrutiny. In my opinion, the issue of the Freedom Convoy is the catalyst for this current tenuous position/situation. For me, the most critical component is how we, as a profession, move forward ethically and justly in terms of how we serve and how we lead. Having said that, I am concerned about how events are evolving and the speed of that movement. I believe that we need to consider how best to move forward in a sober, methodical manner. Stating my opinion is a matter of integrity – and it is something I must do.

I am highly cognizant of the information gathered in relation to these events, the intelligence produced, the intelligence disseminated and the actions taken or not taken. I am also acutely aware of the impact of these actions and inactions – i.e. Ottawa. I have played a lead role in pro-actively guiding law enforcement action in relation to its collection of information, production of intelligence and discussion with intelligence partners. I have also heard some police leaders make outlandish, inaccurate claims about the activity that has occurred – these claims were not based in any intelligence or evidence that I am privy to.

Further, I have witnessed the attentiveness and engagement of many persons evolve from virtually nil to significant involvement. This alteration in engagement has occurred with an increasing degree of ‘expert status’. But, many of these discussions are far from expert - they are highly politicized, hyperbolic, self-serving and overwhelmingly informed by media editorials. This sensationalism is leading to a quickening pace of decision-making, and public discourse, in terms of what should, and should not, occur. By way of example, I see a marked increase in the conversation of extremists participating in these events – and Canadians with extreme ideologies leading the charge. Although there are exceptions, I have not seen the evidence of this – in fact, HENDON received and reported very little of this activity. It was not in evidence at the Ambassador Bridge nor events related to the Bluewater Bridge. Further, the events in Toronto did not illustrate this. By way of example, the Canadian Security Intelligence Service [REDACTED] INSET reported that the activity did not meet their threshold in national security. So, I do not know where the political figures are acquiring information or intelligence on the extent of extremist involvement.

The issue has become deeply politicized and political figures and polarized media cite sources of extremism as the prime catalyst – but there are significant difference between seeing political dissent or opponents as “extreme” (a highly subjective measure) and the legal connotations of ideologically motivated violent extremism or terrorism. It is not for me as a police officer to approve or disprove the need for overarching legislation. But, the highly controversial, unprecedented powers to deal with these issues will be subject to significant scrutiny. Organizations that in no way, shape or form would agree with the recent illustrations of dissent (i.e. the Canadian Civil Liberties Association) are heavily critical of the activity currently underway.

have consistently viewed see this movement as a political entity amalgamated by opposition to several factors (i.e. vaccine mandates among others). It is an entity that feels marginalized in its locality but enhanced by its broad appeal nationally – hence its desire for a centralized display of its perspective. It is not an “extremist” movement. It is not comprised of Ideologically Motivated Violent Extremists (IMVEs). The actual leaders are not violent extremists with histories of violent criminal acts – although events due attract unpredictable and extreme elements. The absolute lack of criminal activity across Canada, and the minimal violent crime throughout the event illustrate this.

But now the public discourse is dominated by political figures and the media – and the commentary is providing a very different picture than what law enforcement collectively gathered. It is painting a different picture – it speaks to extremism, it offers parallels to terrorism, it speaks of sedition. I am sending this email because I feel that we are at a turning point. It is time to calmly continue gathering information, understand what we are dealing with and monitor intentions and actions for criminal activity and public order implications. To that extent, I am committed to an intelligence probe to discern what intelligence / evidence can be obtained of criminal offences.

You may ask why I am sending this: I am deeply concerned for the role of contemporary law enforcement and balance in the application of the law to our citizenry. I introduced these matters to several police audiences over the last two weeks with the need to be apolitical, objective and to view the events in context. Our province, our country and our police service, of which I am exceedingly proud, have witnessed illegal occupations, blockades and destruction of infrastructure, mixed with violent offences and significant economic impact, as well as the acquisition of funds via social media for the furthering of this activity and the defense of the perpetrators. In those instances too, I have asked for a considered approach to these divisive events – via the MIMG and other mechanisms. Ultimately as well, I wish personally and professionally to assist my organization and my profession in charting an ethical approach to deal with these matters and to work to remediate and reconcile the deep divisions that they emanate from.
